
Need Help

Posted by JasonBourn - 2008/04/29 04:23

Hi,

I am gonna have 3 days trip with my wife to Thailand. This is our first trip. I am wondering which city is good option for the first time visitors. With 3 days, i can not plan for going form here to there.

Is there anybody out has any suggestions?

Thanks in advance,

--

Jason Bourne

Re:Need Help

Posted by admin - 2008/04/29 04:36

Hi Jason,

3 days is a rather short visit indeed, if you fancy excitement and city life you should of course stay in Bangkok.

However if you want to take it a bit more easy just try Chiang Mai, the second largest city located in the North. Here you will find a more laid back city life with plenty of opportunities to visit the surrounding area's for trekking, biking or hiking.

I would not recommend you to go to either Phuket, Samui or Pattaya as these are tourist centers.

Anything else you would like to know?

Cheers

Re:Need Help

Posted by Jason Bourne - 2008/04/29 04:52

Hi,

Thanks for your reply.

True.It is very short. This will be our first visit but definitely, not last one (:-) if something bad not strike us)

Couple of question.

1. Why you are not recommending those places? Because duration of our stay?
2. We will reach there Friday morning and will leave there on Sunday late night. I am thinking of getting this tour for our Saturday (<http://www.bangkok.com/river-cruise-tours/grandpearl.html>) what is your idea? Good? Bad? Cheap? Expensive? Boring?
3. What else do you recommend to do in Bangkok? I dont want to just come there and hang out in bars every night. Because i can do it here and anywhere else.Some safari shows? night shows? anything interesting?
- 4.Is this a informative website? Or you provide services too?

Thanks

--

Jason Bourne
